Becoming a volunteer

New volunteers are always needed and welcome. However it's important for those thinking about volunteering to consider how much time they can give.

Castlemaine Health tries to match volunteers to roles that suit their interests and skills, and against what is available in the hospital and in aged care.

We also try to match volunteers to patients and residents, so it does take time to get it right.

All new hospital volunteers must complete a registration process that clarifies rights and responsibilities, undergo a police check and take part in volunteer induction training. This process helps ensure that legal and ethical obligations are met, and that the safety of volunteers, patients and residents are protected.

Free training is also made available to volunteers throughout the year, which is delivered jointly with Mount Alexander Shire Council, Maldon Hospital and Castlemaine District Community Health.

If you would like more information about any of these roles, or to discuss your suitability as a Castlemaine Health volunteer, please contact us.
